The Louisiana Center for Children’s Rights, a nonprofit that defends and advocates for young people in Louisiana’s justice system, and serves as the juvenile public defender in New Orleans, seeks a skilled and committed investigator to find and develop the material that assists in defending our clients against delinquency charges. Investigators work closely with trial lawyers in LCCR’s multidisciplinary model of team-based advocacy. The work of investigators is carried out mostly in the field – in private homes, in schools, in businesses, and on the street – and requires creativity, perseverance, empathy, responsibility, and excellent communication skills.

Organizational Overview

In New Orleans, LCCR is the juvenile public defender, providing holistic, dedicated, skilled, and client-directed advocacy for hundreds of young people in the city’s juvenile justice system every year. Our clients are represented by multidisciplinary teams – case managers, social workers, attorneys, and investigators – that develop and implement comprehensive advocacy plans to help children achieve their goals in court and in life. Statewide, LCCR advocates for a smaller, more humane justice system for young people. As part of this, LCCR advocates and represents clients who have/or are facing a life without parole sentence.

LCCR believes that every defense team member brings vital skills and viewpoints to the high-quality advocacy that our clients deserve. Our work includes representing young people in court; investigating the state’s claims and developing strong defenses; helping families navigate the school system to find the right fit for each child; advocating for special education services; connecting clients with community-based services like trauma counseling, medication management, and vocational training; and arranging for young people and their families to
